

PBS WRITERS

WRITERS GUILD OF AMERICA

October 30, 2024

To Susan Goldberg, President and CEO of GBH, Neal Shapiro, President and CEO of THIRTEEN, and Andrew Russell, President and CEO of PBS SoCal:

We are writing to express our solidarity with PBS writers and pledge our support for their fight for a fair and equitable contract.

PBS writers create award-winning, educational, and engaging content that is essential to PBS's mission to inform the American public. Unfortunately, the vital role these writers play in maintaining the high standards of public television is not being reflected in management's approach to ongoing negotiations.

WGA members have waited since July for WGBH, THIRTEEN, and PBS SoCal to agree to meet – but the PBS employers didn't come to the table with their proposals or respond to ours until the end of September, for a contract that was supposed to expire on October 9.

Management has yet to meaningfully engage with the Guild's most important proposals, including full union protections for animation writers; fair compensation for writer-producers; WGA coverage of made-for-new-media programs; and reasonable residual payments for reuse on streaming services.

We stand united in support of all of the WGA's proposals. We urge you to take these negotiations seriously and come to a fair deal.

In solidarity and support,
